

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The semiconductor manufacturing device according to the present invention having a mechanical drive part which is moved in a vacuum device while holding a substrate includes at least one discharge port for introducing an inert gas into the vacuum device, and a flow rate control part for controlling the inert gas which is discharged into the vacuum device from the discharge port at a constant flow rate.

10078357, 022102